Position Description:

Artula Institute for Art and Environmental Education is a dynamic and growing non-profit organization which creates global environmental art education programs, curriculum, workshops and exhibits through the involvement of the community. We are seeking talented workshop interns, who are passionate about education, community involvement, art and the environment – especially the health of our oceans. Candidates would have a positive attitude and be good with people. This position has a strong focus on collaboration, physical labor, clear communication, organization, creative thinking, resourcefulness, artistic excellence and attention to craftsmanship. The workshop interns are to support the Workshop Coordinator and Workshop Assistant in teaching and preparing supplies as well as gather, wash, process and prepare supplies for sculpture production to the specifications of the Lead Artist and Assistant Designer. Interns will assist in the teaching of workshops and demonstrating assembly techniques. Workshop interns will also assist with transportation of marine debris, tools, art supplies and finished piecework and sculptures to designated places.
